ABOUT

Anna Zimmerman is known for her insightful, energetic, and action-oriented approach to guiding both individuals and organizations toward reaching their full potential. With a career deeply rooted in leadership growth and development, Anna's dedication to fostering enriched leadership practices has earned her a reputation as a trusted advisor in the leadership and education community.

Anna loves facilitating groups and helping people unlock what might be keeping them stuck. She is passionate about helping people stay curious about themselves and the world around them. Got an idea? Let's try it, learn from it, and try again! With expertise in executive coaching and leadership training along with her experience in a diverse range of industries, Anna consistently offers solutions that drive both personal growth and organizational success.

Outside of her professional life, you can usually find Anna outside: in her garden, riding her bike, going for a walk, playing with her two spunky little girls, hanging out with neighbors or reading a book on a patio. She loves going dancing with her friends (most recently line dancing, which she loved!), playing trivia with her husband, practicing yoga, and trying new recipes from the New York Times cooking app. She loves an adventure and is always interested in checking out a local festival!
